Kidney stone round two felt like a chainsaw in my gut. ER was a two-hour wait and I'd rather chew glass. Googled "Dilaudid overnight" through gritted teeth. Midnight Drugs' Fast-Acting Relief Delivery blinked back.

Tapped 8 mg tabs, smashed "rush," paid with my card (felt vault-level secure), and curled up on the bathroom tile.

6:11 a.m.doorbell. Small gray mailer, my name only. Inside: pharmacy vial, orange pills, cotton, legit label. Swallowed one with tap water.

By 6:26 the chainsaw shut off. Pain slid from 10 to 3, then 1. Stood up, made toast, actually tasted it.

Timeline for the doubters:

- Ordered 4:05 a.m. → receipt ping
- "Shipped" 4:47 a.m. → tracking live
- Delivered 6:11 a.m. → photo proof

No ER copay, no "we'll page the doc," no tomorrow. Just relief, rush-delivered.

Pain doesn't RSVP. Neither should the fix.
